

08.08.24 | INSTITUTIONAL RETIREMENT PLANS

Retirement Plan Newsletter | Q3 2024

Michael R. Maguire, CFP®, ChFC®, RICP® – Financial Advisor

401(K) AUDITS

Is your 401(k) plan considered a “large plan” according to your Form 5500 filing? If it is, then it will need to be audited annually by an independent auditor. This audit comes with additional oversight, more work for you as employer and substantial cost. Let’s take a closer look at which plans need an audit and what is involved in an audit.

Whether or not your plan requires an audit is determined by the number of participants with a balance in your plan at the beginning of the year. This includes both active employees and terminated employees with a balance. You are considered a “large plan” if you had 100 or more participants with an account balance at the beginning of the plan year.

However, there is an exception referred to as the “80-120 Participant Rule”. Under this rule, plans that have between 80 and 120 participants at the beginning of the plan year may use the same category, small or large plan, that was used the previous year. For example, a plan that filed as a small plan the previous year, and now has 101 participants, can still avoid an audit until they go over 120 participants. This rule allows some flexibility for growing retirement plans.

If your plan is close to the 100 or 120 participant limit it is important to make sure you “clean up” any small terminated employee balances in the plan prior to year-end. Under current rules your recordkeeper or administrator can process an involuntary distribution for any terminated balances under $1,000 and process an involuntary rollover for any balance under $7,000. This annual action could prevent you from the additional cost and effort involved in an audit.

You should work with your plan recordkeeper and/or Third-Party administrator to determine if your plan needs an audit. Audits need to be performed by an independent accounting firm using Generally Accepted Audit Standards (GAAS). The Department of Labor has a helpful guide entitled “Selecting an Auditor for Your Employee Benefit Plan” that can be found here:

<https://www.dol.gov/sites/dolgov/files/ebsa/about-ebsa/our-activities/resource-center/publications/selecting-an-auditor-for-your-employee-benefit-plan.pdf>

The majority of information needed for an audit will be provided directly to the auditor from your plan recordkeeper or TPA. Some of the documents that are typically requested are:

- Plan Documents including adoption agreement, plan document, summary plan description and IRS opinion letter.
- Form 5500
- Fidelity Bond Information
- Employee Census
- Investment Policy Statement
- Investment committee meeting minutes.

John McVey, an Audit Manager at Stowe & Degon in Westborough, MA, explains that “While a 401(k) audit is not the most comfortable thing for Plan Sponsors, it can help them identify areas of noncompliance with Plan documents and help lower the risk of findings that may come from a DOL audit.” A Department of Labor (DOL) Audit is a different and less welcome type of audit. This is an unexpected audit performed by the Employee Benefits Security Administration (EBSA). These audits are typically random but can be the result of 5500 information or complaints from employees.

If you are subject to a DOL audit you will receive a letter looking for a more extensive list of documentation and items. These audits can last anywhere from a few weeks to a year. The best way to navigate this type of audit is to be prepared. Keep records of investment committee meetings, document investment decisions, adhere to the plan document and make timely remittance of employee deferrals.

If you are unclear as to whether your company 401(k) needs an audit, please reach out to your advisor or an accounting firm that specializes in 401(k) audits.

Grimes has a dedicated team that specializes in providing investment advisory services to retirement plan fiduciaries and their employees. We assist clients with investment selection and monitoring, fee benchmarking, plan design and employee education. If you are not sure of your total plan costs or think you are overdue for a thorough review, please feel free to reach out to us.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES:

Please remember that past performance is no guarantee of future results. Different types of investments involve varying degrees of risk, and there can be no assurance that the future performance of any specific investment, investment strategy, or product (including the investments and/or investment strategies recommended or undertaken by Grimes & Company, Inc. (“Grimes”)), or any non-investment related content, made reference to directly or indirectly in this blog will be profitable, equal any corresponding indicated historical performance level(s), be suitable for your portfolio or individual situation, or prove successful. Due to various factors, including changing market conditions and/or applicable laws, the content may no longer be reflective of current opinions or positions. Moreover, you should not assume that any discussion or information contained in this blog serves as the receipt of, or as a substitute for, personalized investment advice from Grimes. To the extent that a reader has any questions regarding the applicability of any specific issue discussed above to his/her individual situation, he/she is encouraged to consult with the professional advisor of his/her choosing. No amount of prior experience or success should be construed that a certain level of results or satisfaction will be achieved if Grimes is engaged, or continues to be engaged, to provide investment advisory services. Grimes is neither a law firm nor a certified public accounting firm and no portion of the blog content should be construed as legal or accounting advice. A copy of the Grimes’ current written disclosure Brochure discussing our advisory services and fees is available for review upon request or at <https://www.grimesco.com/form-crs-adv/>. Please Note: Grimes does not make any representations or warranties as to the accuracy, timeliness, suitability, completeness, or relevance of any information prepared by any unaffiliated third party, whether linked to Grimes’ web site or blog or incorporated herein, and takes no responsibility for any such content. All such information is provided solely for convenience purposes only and all users thereof should be guided accordingly. Please Remember: If you are a Grimes client, please contact Grimes, in writing, if there are any changes in your personal/financial situation or investment objectives for the purpose of reviewing/evaluating/revising our previous recommendations and/or services, or if you would like to impose, add, or to modify any reasonable restrictions to our investment advisory services. Unless, and until, you notify us, in writing, to the contrary, we shall continue to provide services as we do currently. Please Also Remember to advise us if you have not been receiving account statements (at least quarterly) from the account custodian.